www.eurobats.org

Bats are the only flying mammals, having usually one pup per year and become 5 – 6 years old, but in some species even 40 years; female bats take care for the offspring in groups of sisters, aunts, and cousins, without males. All European bat species feed on insects. They have an important role in pest control and are protected under the EUROBATS Agreement.